A sincere thank you to all the donors who made our fall giving campaign a success! Now, are you willing to become more involved in the Opera Guild of Rochester?

As I noted last month in News from Your Opera Guild, in order to continue as an organization the Guild needs some new board members and volunteers. Unfortunately the COVID pandemic has taken its toll on our ability to recruit.

We are looking for board members who can serve as directors and work on a committee. Our committees are Communications, Events, Technology and Volunteers. The average time commitment for a board member will vary with the season, but in most cases would be no more than 10 hours per month. The board meets about 6 times a year and can do so virtually if necessary or advisable. A lot of the work we require assistance with can be done from home by telephone or computer.

We are also looking for volunteers to work on these committees. In some cases, even a small commitment of time would be very helpful.

These two positions can be filled by a person who is or is not a board member. They are Donor-Database Manager and Trip Co-coordinator.

PLEASE give these needs your serious consideration. If you are unable yourself to help in any of these ways, think about those you know with an interest in opera, and let us know about them. We will approach them with discretion. Contact us at operaguildofrochester@gmail.com, or phone, 585-385-6971.

News From Your Opera Guild

I am happy to report that, despite cold and snow, we have had a good turnout for Beat the Blahs – everyone seemed very happy to be going to the opera again, even if it's on DVD. We had a good selection and our new venue worked out very well.

We are also resuming our Lecture/Listening Series at Brighton Memorial Library. See the titles in this issue. We have an exciting special presentation by Cary Ratcliff, great operas not currently being shown elsewhere, and a wonderful evening of opera duets. Hope to see you there.

Carol Crocca

Editor's Corner

A short issue for a short month, even shorter on live opera. Oh well, as of now, Cavalli's La Calisto is still scheduled, although later, and I am still looking forward to it.

I was bemoaning the lack of opera in February in writing as above when I got the email notice about the special showing on February 12 of Fire Shut Up in My Bones from the Met Live in HD. The good news is that in spite of being well-hyped as the first opera by a Black composer staged by the Met, it is also a great opera!

The core subject matter of child sexual abuse is actually handled tactfully. This opera by jazz great Terry Blanchard has excellently-portrayed characters, an engaging and moving story with more than one universal theme, and is nevertheless realistically rooted in the Black experience.

For more, see essays and review in November 2021 Viva Voce (access through [operaguil dofrochester.org](http://operaguil dofrochester.org))

at Henrietta, Eastview, Tinseltown and Webster theaters.

“Magnetically powerful ... It was staggering to witness this jolt of proud kinetic Blackness on the Metropolitan Opera stage ... Triumphant.” —NPR

Last fall, six-time Grammy-winning composer and jazz musician Terence Blanchard made history when Fire Shut Up in My Bones became the first opera by a Black composer to be performed at the Met. Selling out night after night, the powerful adaptation of Charles M. Blow’s moving memoir is about rising above adversity while growing up in the Deep South.

Now, in celebration of Black History Month, audiences can enjoy a special screening of that performance in cinemas, hosted by Broadway legend Audra McDonald and featuring baritone Will Liverman, sopranos Latonia Moore and Angel Blue, and rising star Walter Russell III.

Francesco Cavalli & 17th Century Opera in Venice

by Carol Crocca

Although you may never have heard of him, Francesco Cavalli was a great composer and La Calisto, to be presented by Eastman Opera Theatre this month, is his most popular opera. The story is based on one from Ovid's Metamorphoses: the god Jove, progenitor of all Don Juans, seduces Calisto, a follower of the goddess Diana. Diana herself succumbs to the charms of the shepherd Endymion despite her vow of chastity. Here gods and goddesses are treated as human, with human frailty and flaws. The intrigues and deceptions of love are also here, just as they will remain a staple of opera for the ensuing centuries. Building on the work of his predecessor, Monteverdi, Cavalli is credited with developing the aria as a particular form, shaping its role as the conveyor of emotion and character. Endymion has beautiful love arias, and Calisto has many lyrical expressions of her varied emotions as she moves through her reluctance and confusion to joy and worship of her divine lover. And it ends with a delightful love duet, another lasting convention established in this period. Although Calisto must suffer the wrath of Jove's wife, Juno, there is a happy ending when Jove exalts her to the skies as the Bear - a constellation prize, so to speak.

This was not quite how opera started out, and the history of the genre in the seventeenth century is a fascinating one. In the latter half of the century opera developed from a form composed to appeal to courtiers, originally conceived as based on text with musical accompaniment, to a lyrical expression emphasizing music as the carrier of the drama. How did this come about?

Although it was born in Florence and traveled to the courts of Mantua and Rome, it wasn't until two impresarios, Ferrari and Manelli, brought opera to Venice in 1637 that it became a popular entertainment. Venice, La serenissima, was a republic, which had maintained a political and cultural stability based on its trading wealth since the fifth century. It had no court but many popular festivals, and opera became the staple entertainment of the yearly Carnevale, its audiences composed of all classes of society and thousands of tourists. It was performed in theaters as a commercial venture, responsive to the tastes of the paying public. And here it developed many of the characteristics that would define the genre for centuries to come.

In 1641, opera had its first smash hit, La finta pazza, The Feigned Madwoman, by Francesco Sacrati, which also brought forth the first prima donna, Anna Renzi. Significantly, it contained a mad scene, which became a fixture in the repertoire as a vehicle for such star sopranos, created by their popularity with the new audiences. This opera was rediscovered in 1984 and its modern premiere took place at the Baroque Opera Project at Yale in 2010.

The popularity of Venetian opera created the demand for good singers and new works, which drove the creation of conventions to enable rapid production. Monteverdi, composer of Orfeo in 1600 at Mantua, had moved to Venice in 1613 to become maestro di cappella at St. Mark's, and responded to this new environment by composing Il ritorno d'Ulisse in patria in 1640 and L'incoronazione di Poppea in 1643. The latter contains lyrical arias, amidst a fluid context of recitative and arioso,* which carried the drama and presaged the development of later baroque opera, including that of his successor as the most popular composer in Venice, Francesco Cavalli.

Cavalli wrote 32 operas, of which 28 scores have been preserved, due to his efforts in having them copied and archived in his own time. He succeeded Monteverdi as maestro di cappella of St. Mark's, and composed many of his operas with a famous impresario and librettist named Giovanni Faustini. His work was instrumental in the spread of Italian opera both within and beyond Italy. His most popular opera, Il Giasone, premiered in 1649 and had its modern American premiere on April 30, 2010, also at Yale. This opera is notable for its often ironic or parodic treatment of the myth on which it is based. Many other contemporary composers took this to an extreme and it was one of the causes of the reform of opera instigated by the academies at the end of the century.

Eighteenth century baroque opera seria, of whom Handel is the chief composer heard today, demands a patience, an ability to sit back and enjoy the long aria expositions, because of which contemporary directors have become adept at creating background stage business to keep the audience attentive. (This was unnecessary in the eighteenth century, when audiences were free to mingle, converse, and transact other business during the opera, which many attended several times after the premiere.) But Cavalli and Monteverdi require no such effort, as the music beautifully flows from one scene to another, punctuated appropriately by shorter arias designed to express emotion and character rather than show off the singer's prowess at decoration. In short, we are lucky that these operas have been rediscovered in the 20th century and are available to us at least on DVD, if not often in production. Is the Eastman Opera Theater's presentation a sign that they may be becoming more popular to stage?

One of the main differences between 17th century opera and that of the 18th was the inclusion of comic scenes, often bawdy, designed to appeal to the non-aristocratic segment of the audience. We see this in the one opera Handel wrote on his Italian sojourn (1706-1710), Agrippina, produced at the Met in 2019.

Ultimately, the popular appeal of these developments, including said bawdy scenes, caused such demand that, to fulfill it, composers distorted the literary sources of the stories, plagiarized each other's work shamelessly, and submitted to singers' demands, sometimes for as many as 60 arias in a work. The academies eventually responded about the end of the century, by ordaining, among other things, a complete separation of comedy from serious opera. Nevertheless, the opera seria and the opera buffa of the next century were indelibly marked by the changes wrought in opera's dizzying career in Venice.

I cannot remember exactly how I heard of Cavalli. But I am indebted to Alex Ross (below) for a wonderful exposition of the operas and the Yale Baroque Project, and especially for citing Ellen Rosand's book (also below).

The 2021-2022 Season

January 2022 RIGOLETTO POSTPONED to June 2022

As we are all too familiar with the news, Covid-19 and Omicron cases in New York State and nationwide have been rising. Numerous Broadway shows including Broadway Tours in Buffalo have canceled performances due to Covid-19 cases within the cast and crews. Airlines have canceled thousands of flights due to staffing shortages and forced cancellations. The Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra has postponed 'The Magic Flute'; half of our Opera Marathon! Weekend due to concerns among the musicians with unmasked opera singers. Ensuring cast, musicians and crew arrive safely and timely in these uncertain travel times, to a potential positive Covid test that would immediately shut the production down, is a sobering potential outcome in these unprecedented times. As these issues present extreme uncertainty ahead plus increased challenges from the pandemic and many factors outside of our control, we are postponing our January 22nd and January 23rd, 2022 production of Rigoletto to summer performances Saturday, June 25th at 7:00pm and Sunday, June 26th at 4pm at Nichols Flickinger Center for the Performing Arts, 1250 Amherst St, Buffalo. We are reaching out to everyone who purchased tickets which can be exchanged for the June performances, donated or fully refunded. Exchanges, refunds and tickets for the June 25th & 26th performances are also available at the BPO Box Office, 3 Symphony Circle, 716-885-5000.

The 2022 Festival will feature productions of Rodgers & Hammerstein's The Sound of Music, originally slated for the summer of 2020. Bizet's Carmen takes the stage in a new production directed by 2022 Artist in Residence Denyce Graves, followed by the new work Tenor Overboard, weaving some of Rossini's most spectacular music together in a new comic opera with a book by the famed playwright Ken Ludwig. The next installment of Common Ground, the Festival's multi-year initiative of new, commissioned works, is a double bill of Kamala Sankaram and Jerre Dye's Taking Up Serpents, paired with the world premiere one-act Holy Ground, by Damien Geter and Lila Palmer; together with young artists' productions and other events. No calendar has been posted yet, and no tickets are available yet.

Artistic & General Director Francesca Zambello has announced the 2022 Festival will be her 12th and final season in her leadership role with the company.

There is now a season calendar on the website. Tickets go on sale in January.

Because of the uncertainties in planning most aspects of the production this year, Pegasus has decided to postpone production of Orfeo until next summer season. (Everything [good] comes to he or she who waits.)

This ground-breaking opera, written in 1607 and considered the first "real" opera, still has the power to captivate audiences over 400 years later, with its universal story, virtuosic expressive music, and colorful orchestration. Its themes of love and loss, human weakness and strength, redemption and the power of music, remain relevant today and will resonate profoundly with our audiences.

As Orfeo, famous for his musical prowess, joyfully celebrates his marriage to Euridice, a messenger brings the news that she has died. Orfeo travels the treacherous path to the Underworld to win her back-with his seductively entrancing music -only to lose her again because of his own doubt. Eventually escorted by the god Apollo, he ascends to the heavens where he can be reunited in the stars with his Euridice. A cast of shepherds, nymphs, spirits, and gods support the flow of the drama with dance, heartfelt solos, and dynamic choruses, that comment on and interpret the action.

We are thrilled to present tenor Colin Balzer in the virtuosic and dramatically expressive role of Orfeo, the singer who must travel to Hell and back to regain his beloved Euridice.
